Court Orders U.M.W. To Stand Trial For Contempt Monday

Union To Face Both Criminal And Civil Issues

Court Refuses Plea Contempt Charges

By PHILLIPS J. PECK

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.-Federal Judge Richmond B. Keech refused today to dismiss contempt proceedings against the United Mine Workers and ordered the union to stand trial Mondayprobably before a jury.

Keech's ruling means that the UMW has failed to purge itself sufficiently of contempt charges lodged by the government because 350,000 soft coal miners refused to obey a court injunction to end their strike.

The judge's decision to proceed with the contempt trial was made despite an affidavit by John L. Lewis that he is "constantly" and "assiduously' 'trying to end the walkout.

Keech denied a motion by the justice department that the trial be started tomorrow because of the mounting seriousness of the work stoppage.

Can Impose Punishment Under the proceedings now facing the mine union, the court can impose virtually "unlimited" punishment. The UMW and Lewis, personally, already have paid fines totalling $2,130,000 for two previous contempt convictions.

On its first conviction, the
UMW paid a fine of $700,000 and Lewis $10,000: On the second conviction, these fines were dou-

It is probable that the government will recommend at least a doubling of this latter fine, and may ask even more severe punish-

The court's action came after the union argued that it had complied fully and in good faith with Keech's anti-strike order but that the miners were continuing the walkout of their own volition.

Keech said the union will be tried Monday for both civil and criminal contempt. On the latter count it will be entitled to have the case heard by a jury.

The government had requested that the two counts be separated and that the trial proceed immediately on civil contempt. Under this charge the court can levy almost unlimited fines against the UMW for disobedience of its antistrike decree.

No Reason For Two Trials The jurist ruled, however:

"There's no reason for this case to be tried twice. We will proceed Monday on its dual aspect the union is Only citation. charged with defiance of the court's order. Assistant Attorney General H. Graham Morison told the court this morning that the union had failed to purge itself of contempt and tried to get the trial advanced to Saturday. Morison said:

MANCHESTER, N. H., Feb. 24 .-'The finger woman' 'in the Sander case-Miss Josephine Connor, a prim, plump. 40-year-old nurseheld the spotlight today in Manchester's "mercy killing" trial.

She told the jury, in a firm, unemotional voice, that Dr. Hermann N. Sander had dictated to herfor the hospital record-that he had injected air into the veins of his cancer-doomed patient, 59-yearold Mrs. Abbie C. Borroto, with the result that she died ten minutes

The nurse disclosed that Dr. Sander, in answer to her question about the air injection, had said: 'Patient Died Easily'

"It worked pretty good, and the patient died easily. This comment came, she said, on December 12-eight days after the death of Mrs. Borroto. It was not until December 29, according to the prosecution's opening statement, that Miss Connor turned in Dr. Sander when she was checking up the records for her month's end report.

Another Ship Of Hope Sunk (By HOLMES ALEXANDER)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 24 .- Quietly but with deadly effect Secretary of State Acheson has torpedoed present hopes for an international super-government. It is a subject on which at least onefourth of the Senators have one way or another expressed their approval. Secretary Acheson officially pulled the trigger last week when he sent his spokesman. Deputy Under Secretary Rusk, to Capitol Hill to testify against the proposal of Atlantic Union. But for some time past Mr. Acheson, by studied indifference and implied disapproval, has doomed this little ship of hope which was floated on the #### troubled international waters. Hope Was Pretty Idealistic

Perhaps it wasn't much of a ship and possibly the hope was pretty idealistic. It won't do to suppose that Mr. Acheson acted testily or without due thought. Yet his action needs to be considered as part of the strangely fatalistic policy which he has brought to the conduct of American foreign affairs. We may ask, then, why Mr. Acheson is against pursuing the dream of world government, in part or whole, and what result, if any, may be expected to flow from his decision.

There appear to be two unannounced reasons for Mr. Acheson's negativism in this case. First, there was the British election campaign which reached its peak while the world government plans stood before the Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee. For many years Winston Churchill has been agitating for various forms of Federalism. He has long wanted to unite the English-speaking peoples of the earth. 1940 he made the amazing offer of a common citizenship for British and French nationals. Since the war he has been leader of the Western Union movement for Europe. Mr. Acheson's indorsement of Atlantic Union might have seemed a nod of approval to Churchill's bid for British leadership or Churchill might have claimed that it was. whole Truman Cabinet to its credit managed to stay completely out of

Another Reason For Attitude

But there was another reason for Mr. Acheson's attitude toward world government plans. This reason also embraces his coldness toward a Truman-Stalin conference on the H-Bomb. The Secretary, perhap because of the China fiasco, is leery of another American failure in foreign affairs. What if an H-Bomb conference were held and came to nothing? What if the U. S. Senate did pass the Atlantic Union resolution, requesting the President to call a constitutional convention of the Atlantic Democracies, and the whole project fell flat on its face? We might then look as foolish in Europe as we look in China, and it's possible that we can't afford the risk.

Eager internationalists among the Atlantic Unionists and World Federalists are impatient of such caution. But with all respect for their sincerity, it should be recognized that Mr. Acheson has a point, It's highly doubtful whether the American people as a whole are ready to submerge their national sovereignty in Federalism with foreign powers. The Atlantic Unionists, the World Federalists and others can afford to fail this year and to try again next year. But Mr. Acheson can't, or believes that he can't. This is his sophomore term as Secretary of State, the real period of test. This is also an election year, a time when the in-party doesn't embrace causes which need another year to mature.

Nor Is There Any Assurance

Nor is there any assurance that the six European nations on the Atlantic Union invitation list would accept. Gone now is the atomic monopoly under which we once offered protection against Russian invasion. Dr. Harold Urey, the atomic scientist, suggested that Russia will soon use her own H-Bomb to dissuade European nations from further dealings in the U.S. An invitation to union, offered by us and rejected by them, would be a withering rebuff to American foreign

Yet the results of Mr. Acheson's polite thumbs-down on world government plans may be quite unpleasant. He seems certain to lose, if he hasn't already lost it, the good opinion of many enlightened internationalists. Some of these, like former Justice Owen Roberts, backed the Atlantic Pact and the Military Assistance Program with the idea that these plans were only a beginning. The Pact and the MAP were half-measures at best. They have now been made obsolete by the Russian A-Bomb. We are caught between our promises to protect Europe and our inability to do so.

The question seems to be-Shall we stand pat on these half-measures, or shall we take full-measures which call for Federalism? Mr. Acheson has chosen to stand pat. Right or wrong, he has effectively torpedoed any hope of advancing world government plans at this session of Congress

HERE and THERE IN SPORTS LAND

RANK MENKE, veteran sports writer and author of Menke's Encylo pedia of Sports, the finest record book put together, in a letter to Bill Corum, I.N.S. sports writer, assigns Jim Jeffries as the top heavyweight since Jim Figg, gives Dempsey, second place, and adds: "You can have the rest". . Here & There visited with Menke, at Fairfield, Conn., last summer, sports and athletes, being the topics of conversation. Hsi letter to Corum follows:

"Dear Bill-What is too often forgotten in ringdom lore is that, given a bit more emotional stability, Jack Sharkey might have made it as the greatest heavyweight of them all-from the time of Jim

"I was Jack Dempsey's 'ghost writer' for more than 13 years and, without boasting, knew him better than Jack Kearns. I've met all the moderns, in action or in retirement, since John L. Sullivan was

"My vote on how they ranked goes to Jim Jeffries first, Jack Dempsey second, and you can have the rest.

"In Joe Louis case, it must be recalled that the general class of men he met-and whipped, would not have been ranked as eligibles for sparring partners for Jeffries, Fitz, Tunney or Dempsey.

"As I recall in 19 of the Louis 'fights', his own hand-picked referee, Arthur Donovan, was in the ring. Let me name my own referee to help me in the clinches, and out of them, and I can whip you and two other gents named Joe Doakes next Friday at 4 p. m.

"Dempsey knocked down Willard seven times and still wasn't the winner at that juncture. He flattened Luis Firpo seven times and still had to do it a couple of more before he was 'still the cham-

"Now, chum, name me one fighter who wasn't classed as the loser-by Donovan-after Louis had flattened him just twice. "Sharkey exploded the Harry Wills myth. He had Dempsey beaten to a pulp in 1927 until he had a balloon, or something, explode in his head. He actually beat Max Schmeling twice, but won officially only once due to help that Schmeling got from outside the ring, and in the ring from his manager, Joe Jacobs. 'Sharkey was fast, clever, a murderous puncher and a man who could take it. He feared no one and fought all who would accept a match with him. He was terrific and classed, by some, as a bum. "Who, at his best, could have whipped Sharkey when Sharkey's mental reflexes were at their best? Sincerely, Frank Menke."

Here & There has taken from Menke's Enclyopedia facts concerning Sharkey, as follows: Jack won the heavyweight title from Max Schmeling June 21, 1928 and lost it to Primo Carnera, June 28, 1933.

He fought 55 fights, his last having been in 1936. Of the 55, fourteen were won by knockout; 20 by decision; three by foul; boxed five draws. Lost four by knockout, dropped eight decisions and lost once on a foul.

Eddie Giosa Wins Split Decision

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 24. --(INS)—The debut of Philadelphia's spunky Eddie Giosa as a welterweight almost proved his come uppance as he barely wrested a split decision from Italy's Ermano Bonetti, a last-minute substitute for Aldo Minelli.

Giosa, at 141, found the going 9:00—Air Force Hour rough, especially in the late rounds of the eight-rounder at the Met ring in North Philadelphia, when he had cuts ovtr both eyes.

FUEL FORECAS'

KNOXVILLE. — (INS)—Modern science has pushed back the day when an entirely new type of fuel will be needed to replace gasoline, according to Dr. Hilton A. Smith, University of Tennessee chemistry professor. "Years ago people were predicting that our petroleum resources would be gone before 1950," said Dr. Smith. "However, advances made in using more of the crude oil, new conservation methods, and new field discoveries have postponed the day of exhaustion indefinitely."
